

MANAGING REDUNDANCIES IN THE FAIR WORK ACT ENVIRONMENT

A consequence of Australia's current patchwork economy is that many organisations are experiencing a downturn in business. Regrettably, this has forced many companies to reduce employee numbers and make redundancies.

The Fair Work Act creates new rules around redundancy. Our experience is that new remedies available under the law are being sought more frequently by employees and unions.

If your organisation may need to implement redundancies in the future, it would be a significant advantage to learn the latest in what you can and can't do as an employer, how to handle the more difficult cases and to discuss the latest trends.

Our two-hour Breakfast Briefing provides a practical update on current law and practice.

COURSE CONTENT

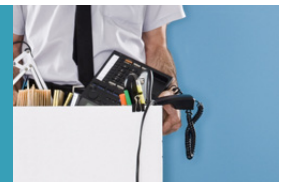

- What is a redundancy under the Fair Work Act, when does it arise and what are my obligations?
- What does a good redundancy process look like?
- What is the current benchmark for redundancy entitlements?
- What are senior managers and executives entitled to?
- Can employees challenge their selection for redundancy?

There will also be time for your questions.

The briefing will be conducted by an experienced Ai Group Adviser.
